Carter steps up the pace at Camp David summit

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter stepped up the pace at the Mideast summit Thursday, bringing Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin together for two face-to-face sessions within six hours.

Under Carter's guidance, Begin and Sadat discussed the thorniest issues of the 30-year old Arab-Israeli conflict during the secrecy-shrouded talks at this presidential retreat in Maryland's Catoctin mountains.

Carter's negotiating strategy is to avoid the easier course of beginning with peripheral and less controversial items. An Egyptian official, asking to remain anonymous, said Carter, Begin and Sadat were discussing central issues.

But Jody Powell, White House press secretary and summit spokesman, dismissed the notion of U.S. troops in the Mideast as "one of the great non-existent stories of all time." He described as "hogwash" reports that the administration was considering an American air base in territories won by Israel in the 1967 war.

At nightfall, Carter planned to take a break with the Egyptian president and Israeli prime minister at a display of precision-drilling by U.S. Marines brought to Camp David from Washington.

Then, with Mrs. Carter, the president was hosting a reception for summit delegations.

The U.S. president is trying to persuade Sadat and Begin to compromise their differences over borders, Jewish settlements, a Palestinian homeland and peace terms.

There was no word from the Egyptians, the Israelis or the Americans about whether Carter was making progress.

Carter, Begin and Sadat met for three hours.

Earlier Thursday, as the day's first big-three meeting was drawing to a close, Powell touched on Carter's determination to work out meaningful compromises toward a settlement.

Powell said he would "certainly not be surprised" if the discussion dealt with such troublesome topics as the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

It was the second three-way meeting in two days. Powell said Carter, Begin and Sadat would take "breaks" over the weekend for religious observances at Camp David — but "there will be no overall break."

The spokesman declined to describe the mood at the meeting. "I don't feel that is necessary at this point," Powell said. "... Not having been there, I wouldn't want to characterize them with any term that has reverberations."

Powell also refused to term the talks a resumption of direct negotiations between Egypt and Israel. The negotiations were broken off last January in Jerusalem at the ministerial level.

Egyptian sources said they expected the talks to be extended into next week. But Powell made no predictions beyond the weekend.

Carter brought Begin and Sadat together at 10:40 a.m. EDT. Their meeting in Aspen Lodge, the U.S. president's quarters, ended at 1:35 p.m.

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown was summoned to Camp David. Powell said it was because of his general role and expertise in the area. But Brown and other key advisers did not participate in Carter's meeting with Begin and Sadat. The three leaders were alone for their three-way session.

LDS Church extends call to black, former Y student

By JOHN WAGNER
Universe Staff Writer

On Sept. 23 a dream will come true for Mary Sturlaugson. The former BYU student will enter the Mission Home in Salt Lake City and embark on a two-year mission to San Antonio, Texas.

Miss Sturlaugson, 21, is one of the first black missionaries for the LDS Church and probably the first female black to venture forth into the mission field.

For years, Miss Sturlaugson "hated whites and especially Mormons." While living in the ghettos of Chattanooga, Tenn., she believed "Mormons taught that blacks were the lowest grade of people on earth and could never be anything in their church."

The senior English major — who comes from a family of 24 children — was attending Dakota Wesleyan University in 1975 in Mitchell, S.D., researching Indians on the Cheyenne Reservation, when two Mormon missionaries knocked at her door.

At first Miss Sturlaugson did not want to let them in, but later she changed her mind "because I wanted to tell them what I thought of Mormons."

The encounter began with a barrage of name-calling, as the Elders meekly stood there. When she was through, they told her the accusations were not true and that they had an important message to give her.

"Eventually, through the Elders' patience and concern, the doors were opened to love and understanding," Miss Sturlaugson recalled. "I gradually saw the light."

After being baptized in South Dakota Jan. 31, 1976, Mary learned about BYU from the missionaries and moved to Provo, where she continued her studies in English. She attended the Washington Seminar in 1977.

"I was in the church for about a year when I applied to go on a mission," she said. "They told me 'no.' The stake president and a church official said neither Saints nor Gentiles were ready for a black in the mission field."

Last May, Miss Sturlaugson applied again for a mission. The stake president called church authorities and they decided "the time was not yet ready for blacks."

Hot race shaping up for primary

By MARK WOODLAND
and SID YOUNG
Universe Staff Writers

Five days remain before Utah County voters decide five primary contests and select candidates for the final elections in five non-partisan contests.

Even though in the past student voter turnout has been relatively low in primaries, it has shown a significant increase in November final elections. Of the 252 Utah County voting districts, seven are considered student districts because of large student housing complexes, Wymount Terrace and Wyview Trailer Park.

Registration for Tuesday's primary closed Sept. 1, but will reopen Wednesday when registration for Nov. 7 final elections begins.

Students may fulfill voter eligibility requirements by being an American citizen, at least 18-years-old, a resident of Utah for 30 days and a resident of the district in which he or she is voting.

According to William F. Huish, Utah County Clerk, requests for absentee ballots may be made in person, but actual ballots must be mailed out. The deadline for such mail-outs is today, Huish said. Completed ballots must be postmarked no later than Tuesday and must reach the county clerk's office no later than Sept. 18.

"Because this is a party primary, a voter must decide which party ballot he will mark and which he will discard," said Huish. "This year only two parties have primary contests, so each voter must decide upon either the Republican or Democratic ballot," Huish added.

Four primary contests will appear on the Republican side of the ballot. H. Jerry Bradshaw and E. Dee Olpin are both seeking the Republican nomination for a two-year Utah County commission term. The winner of this primary contest will face incumbent Yukus Y. Inouye in the general election.

In the race for a four-year Utah County Commission term, Cleve C. Child is seeking to unseat incumbent Kenneth J. Pinegar for the Republican nomination. The winner will face Democrat Glen Larsen in the final election.

Wayne B. Watson, Orem, is challenging incumbent Noall T. Wootton for the Republican nomination for county attorney. The winner will face Democrat Casey Christensen in November.

The fourth contest on the Republican ticket is the race for constable, a recently created county office. Don H. Forsyth, current constable, and Raeldon C. Palmer are both seeking the Republican nomination. The winner will face Wilford "Bill" Hansen in the final election.

It's a 'Cabbit'

By DENISE WADSWORTH
Universe Staff Writer

Is it a cat? Is it a rabbit? No. Actually it's neither one. It's a "cabbit."

Val Chapman, Escrito, N.M., was visiting his aunt in Springville Thursday and displayed what he called "the world's first cabbit" in the Animal Science Building at BYU.

"Cabbit" hopped onto my property one day," Chapman recalled as he stood holding the unique creature on a leash. "I had nothing to do with breeding her. It all happened naturally."

Cabbit meows like a cat but hops about like a rabbit. Unlike most felines, however, she's a vegetarian. "She eats dry cat food, lettuce, raw potatoes and cabbage," Chapman said. "She won't eat catfood with a meat flavor."

In May 1977 Cabbit gave birth to three little Cabbits by caesarian section. One lived. "The baby cabbits were taken caesarian because of their unusually large size," Chapman says. Recat, the offspring of Cabbit stays at home. "He fights with Cabbit and I don't want the hassle," he adds.

"I put cabbit in the same room as a rabbit and she'll eat out of the same bowl, but if I put her in with a cat, she will totally ignore it," says Chapman.

Cabbit has cat hair towards the front of her body, but the consistency becomes more like fur towards the rear. She has the odor of a rabbit, and she's broad through the hips where cats are much thinner.

Dr. Robert Park, professor of Animal Science said, "Nobody has proved it possible or impossible. Chromosome tests should be conducted to see if it's a freak of nature."

This "unique creature" is the world's first 'cabbit', a cross between a cat and a rabbit, according to its owner.

Pres. Kimball to deliver annual talk

LDS Church President Spencer W. Kimball will speak Tuesday at BYU's first devotional assembly for Fall semester.

A capacity crowd of nearly 23,000 is expected to attend the assembly at 10 a.m. in the Marriott Center. The public is invited.

President Kimball's address will be broadcast live over KBYU-TV, Channel 11. Both stations will carry the address again at 9 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 17.

After the assembly, President Kimball will meet in the Marriott Center with student body officers. Following a luncheon for members of the Kimball family, he will meet informally with about 60 BYU administrators and deans of colleges.

During previous visits to the BYU campus, President Kimball has received the Exemplary Manhood Award from the Associated Students, the respected Elk Skin Award from Indian students and an honorary doctor of laws degree from BYU.

He serves as chairman of the BYU Board of Trustees and chairman of the Church Board of Education. The latter board serves more than 362,000 students in Church Educational System programs throughout the world.

President Kimball became leader of the worldwide Church Dec. 30, 1973, following a long career of Church service.

'Stellar' dream fulfilled for hospital patient

By LON WILCOX
Universe Staff Writer

As they have done thousands of times in the past, and probably will many more times in the future, the pacemakers, aliens and epic battles of "Star Wars" flashed across the movie screen.

The audience was gripped with the action, but this time the audience was a young man on a stretcher surrounded by hospital attendants and newpeople. Steve McGruder had wanted to see the movie for a long time, and finally on his chance.

When the 22-year-old suffered a fractured neck in a motorcycle accident three and a half months ago at nearby sand dunes recreation area, he decided his chance was far in the future. But thanks to the efforts of one concerned person at Utah Valley Hospital, he saw Darth Vader Thursday morning.

Steve is a quadriplegic who requires assistance just to breathe. There is a constant system of monitoring to insure the numerous complications that could end his life do not occur. Just to indicate his wants requires the use of a small plastic vibrating device that when set against the side of his throat enables him to create sounds of speech.

The person responsible for his "dream come true" is Phil Thaut, a respiratory therapist at the hospital. When he learned of Steve's desire, he began to contact people. The other therapists involved with Steve's rehabilitation program agreed to donate their time to help Steve make the trip to and from the theater and watch the movie, and the hospital made available the necessary equipment.

Bonnie Able, manager of the Carillon Square Theaters agreed to make arrangements to show the movie and the projectionist even offered to donate his time.

Finally, Doug Staley, owner of Transmed Ambulance Service, Payson, agreed to provide the needed ambulance for transportation and one of his crews donated time also.

At 10 a.m. Thursday Steve was made as comfortable as possible on a stretcher parked in the center of the theater aisle with ventilator and suction unit in place behind. As Luke Skywalker, Han Solo and Chewbacca battled the evil forces of the Empire, Steve was joined in his enjoyment by therapists, ambulance drivers and newpeople.

Orem's police chief in 'ordinary person'

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

Orem's newly appointed police chief certainly not a television stereotype. He's a husband and father, and to him, to describe himself, an "ordinary person."

apt. Theodore Peacock will replace of Robert Wadman Sept. 16 when he becomes a member of the Police and Liquor Law Enforcement team.

"Police work isn't like television," he said. "There's a lot of hard work, anxieties, stress and emotion. Exciting and dangerous adventures in television do occur, but not as much."

According to Wadman, Peacock is a fit for the job. "His past experience and insight into the community have been building blocks to him highly qualified. Not even a small search could produce a better fit," he said.

Peacock said he will be a new chief attended BYU and State College prior to joining Orem Police force in 1961. Since that time he has served as sergeant, in the patrol and investigative divisions and has served as lieutenant captain. Under Wadman he was a team commander in charge of the 10th division.

In his spare time, Peacock said he enjoys his family. "We like to hunt and fish. Our activities are spread around each other."

Peacock said the life of a policeman often be difficult. "It's a fact that he have the highest divorce rate, stress, nervous and emotional problems." He feels, however, that though the Orem force works under high pressure, the morale among the men is high.

been a major goal of the force. "In two years we have reduced the crime rate from 51 crimes per 1,000 people to 37 crimes per 1,000 people. We have a successful crime prevention program and we have tried to involve the community in our work."

Police officers in Utah Valley are exposed to the same type of danger as officers in other areas, Peacock said, but the close calls in his own career are no different than those of any other officer. "At one time or another an officer will face being shot, as well as other dangers that may take his life. We train our officers to accept that and take measures to prevent it."

To Captain Peacock that's part of his job.

House upholds Carter veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter won a surprisingly strong victory in his first veto confrontation with Congress as the House upheld on Thursday his rejection of the Defense Authorization Act and its $2 billion military aircraft carrier.

Despite an intensive bipartisan campaign mounted by the armed services committees in both House and Senate to override the Aug. 17 veto, Carter was sustained with power to spare.

The vote to override failed 191-206, or 74 votes short of the necessary two-thirds. Leaders on both sides of the issue had predicted a much closer outcome.

Abortion law goes into effect

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One of the nation's most restrictive abortion laws goes into effect Friday in Louisiana in the latest attempt by a state or city government to counter the U.S. Supreme Court's decision liberalizing the availability of abortions.

However, it faces an immediate challenge. A hearing is scheduled Oct. 18 in U.S. District Court here on a request by four of the law for a preliminary injunction to block its enforcement. Pending the outcome of that hearing, the state has agreed not to enforce the law.

It is the Louisiana Legislature's second attempt to negate the Supreme Court's 1973 ruling, which, in effect, said governments may not interfere with a woman's right to an abortion so long as it is performed in the early stages of pregnancy. A 1976 statute intended to make abortion murder by defining a person as a "human being from the moment of fertilization" was ruled unconstitutional by a federal judge.

Teachers strike nationwide

(AP) — About 10,000 Cleveland school employees demanding higher pay set up picket lines Thursday, adding to a series of strikes that have disrupted the opening of classes for more than 500,000 students across the nation.

Teachers either went on strike or continued walking in the picket line Wednesday in Seattle, Chicago and New Orleans. But in Philadelphia, a tentative agreement could send the city's 250,000 pupils back to school on time next week.

Strikes were either in effect or threatened by teachers in Washington state, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio, Indiana, Vermont, California, Idaho, New York and New Jersey.

In Utah...

Firemen protest KSL report

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — More than 70 off-duty firemen gathered Thursday in front of television station KSL to protest news reports critical of the county fire department's training program.

Spokesmen for the group met with KSL news officials for more than one hour. KSL assignment editor Ernie Ford said the station stands behind the reports as accurate and will continue other reports in the planned series.

KSL's report Wednesday night was the second in a series on the county fire department by reporter Brad White. It was based in part on comments from a retired battalion chief.

Ford said other firemen supported the allegations but did not want to appear on the air.

White reported that firemen who were supposed to be in training sessions were often doing household chores around the station instead.

Groundbreaking is scheduled

Groundbreaking ceremonies for what is to be the third largest building in Utah County, are scheduled Friday at 9:15 a.m. on the construction site located east of I-15 near the Spanish Fork exchange.

The 216,000 square foot building is scheduled for completion in April 1979, and will house Kirby Building System's fourth facility. According to Julie Moretti of Uvida Industries, an industrial promotion company, about 200 local residents will be employed by the company when the building is completed.

Applications for employment will be handled through local Job Service offices and will be available in November.

Fire dept. holds flea market

A flea market will be held Saturday, Sept. 9 at the Provo North Park, 500 North and 500 West, to raise funds for a burn victim fund, according to Craig Peterson of the Provo Fire Department.

Money acquired will be used to assist burn victims who experience financial loss. The Flea Market is scheduled from noon to 6 p.m. Peterson said thousands of dollars worth of new and used merchandise will be for sale to the public.

Those interested in donating items to be used in the flea market are encouraged to call 374-8388 to arrange for pickup or bring them to the Provo Fire Department, 359 W. Center St.

On campus...

Students abuse phone service

Students at BYU are unaware of the small cost to place a 1-minute coast-to-coast long distance call and instead are placing an alarming number of code calls to convey messages to friends and families.

According to Merrill Hymas, Provo district customer service manager for Mountain Bell, 21 cents is all it costs to call coast-to-coast at certain hours of the day and during most of the weekend.

"Students traveling to and from school often call home and convey their message, through a prearranged code, without having to pay for it," he explained.

BYU President Dallin Oaks has come out strongly against such unethical and illegal practices. He has stated that it is dishonest to use the telephone to send messages that don't result in fair charges on a person's telephone bill.

"The telephone company sells the services of its long distance lines," Oaks explained. "When a person uses those lines to convey messages but evades payment, that person has stolen something from the company."

In the weather

Utah — Mostly fair today with chance of a few thunder-showers lingering east. Fair over the state tonight and Saturday. Lows 45-60. Highs upper 70s to low 90s.

•Black woman gets call to fulfill mission in Texas

Presidency announced the revelation giving the Priesthood to worthy black men in the church.

"I was in the employment office in downtown Provo, when a man came up to me and said, 'did you hear what I just heard?' At first I didn't believe it, but later I realized it was true ... and my prayers were answered."

As she walked down the street, passersby in cars honked their horns and waved. Suddenly, blacks were accepted in the church, but would they be accepted by Mormons?

Miss Sturlaugson said she was still a realist. "Sure, we have the Priesthood, but it doesn't matter what you have in writing, people still look. It is still going to be hard and take time."

That night she went to sleep and woke up frequently, thinking it had been a dream. But by her bedside she had a copy of The Daily Universe "Extra" on the revelation, and by looking at it she knew the news was true.

Asked why she wanted to go on a mission, Mary said, "I just want to give the same love that was given to me by the missionaries in the Rapid City, South Dakota Mission."

So in the next two weeks, Mary Sturlaugson will sell her 1978 Camaro, and with financial help from the Edgemont Stake, she will embark on her two-year mission to Texas.

"I realize Mormons aren't perfect ... but we are all children of our Heavenly Father, without regard to race, color or creed," Miss Sturlaugson said. "Perhaps one reason the blacks didn't get the Priesthood before was they may not have been able to handle the responsibility while they were struggling as slaves and in the ghettos."

But now, she concluded, blacks are ready to receive the Priesthood and fulfill their duties, including missions throughout the world.

•Primaries shaping up

The Democratic ballot carries only one primary contest. BYU sociology professor Philip R. Kunz and Michael D. Wilberg are both seeking the Democratic party nomination for State Representative from District No. 37. The winner will face incumbent Lee W. Farnsworth, a BYU political science professor.

According to Huish, all voters will be able to vote non-partisan ballots for their districts. Five races are contested, and the Sept. 12 vote will narrow the race to two candidates for each office. The offices and candidates are:

State School Board member, District No. 7 — Ross B. Denham, Ben F. Mortensen and Neil C. Rawlinson.

Alpine School District No. 5 — William A. Miller, Kenneth A. Rushton and Kenneth D. Whimpey.

Nebö School District No. 4 — Jerry D. Grover, Blair R. Hamilton and Richard A. Johnson.

Nebö School District No. 5 — Martin E. Boyer, J. Leonard Harris and Hermann A. Peine.

Justice of the Peace, Precinct No. 6 — J.D. Christensen, Lew Christensen, D. Karl Mangum and C. Eugene Tippetts.

Student organization gives marrieds voice

Married students can now have a voice in campus and civic affairs through a relatively new organization known as the Married Students Organization.

The group, formed two years ago, helps married students cope with problems unique to married life, such as housing and expenses. The organization is a type of lobbying effort for married students, according to Don Wyre, MSO president.

Since the organization is labeled as off-campus spouses and children of students are more completely represented and nonstudents can also hold office in the group, Wyre said.

The organization is currently working to solve the problem of children falling from balconies. Wymount Terrace, Wyre said.

Break ins reported in Provo businesses

Two Provo businesses were broken into sometime Wednesday night in what appear to be related crimes, Provo City Police said Thursday.

Provo detectives Keith Miner and Martin Sheer-man said the Pearson Tire Co., 100 W. 265 South and Hansen Candy and Distributing Co., 830 W. Center, were broken into sometime between 6 p.m. and 7:30 a.m.

Evidence at both establishments indicates the crimes may have been committed by the same person or persons — probably from the local area, Sheer-man said.

At Pearson's the burglars apparently gained access by climbing a chain link and barbed wire fence and then breaking a window on the south side of the building.

Blood was found on the fence and window as well as inside the building, police said. After entering the building the burglars apparently searched the premises but did not take anything.

At Hansen's, access was gained through a door on the east side of the building. Grant Hansen of Provo, owner of the store, said the thieves had probably used a crowbar to force open the door. Before doing so however, two metal doors at the rear of the building were manipulated, but only the doorknobs were pried off.

Once inside, thieves apparently searched the basement and took a small amount of merchandise and then went to the front office where they forced open a locked desk and took an undetermined amount of cash, Hansen said. A .38-caliber pistol was also taken, according to Detective Sheer-man.

Hansen said there had been no other break-in during the 38 years they had been in that location.

A BYU student was elected president of the student affiliate of the National Environmental Health Association while attending their national convention in Colorado.

Doug Pickup, a senior majoring in microbiology, was elected president of the organization at the convention in Snow Mass, Colo. Eight other BYU students and Dr. Robert Jurgener, professor of health science, also attended.

The Environmental Health Association is an organization of professionals involved in the inspection and enforcement of health laws at the local, state, and national levels. They involve many people, on the assistant surgeon general at state and county health inspectors.

"Enhancement of health through control of the environment is the organization's aim," Pickup said.

The student affiliate of The National Environmental Health Association has 38 chapters in 30 states. BYU has the only chapter in Utah, with a current membership of 5 to 30 students.

As national president, Pickup will contribute to the organization's monthly periodical. He also will meet with the association's board of directors and assist in the formation of more student chapters on campus.

LWC Phonecenter still open; one more day for student orders

The rush for telephones is on. Students have already picked up 2,100 phones at the phone center in the Kinison Center, but today is the last they may pick up and order their phones on campus.

Students with modular plug-in phones can pick up their telephones in a mobile van located on the walk north of the Wilkinson Center.

After today all phone transactions will be handled at the downtown news office, 75 East 100 North. Students wish to get extension lines, they can contact the people at phone center or the downtown news office.

Providing the opportunity for students to apply for telephone service on campus has proved more convenient than the reduced the heavy load at the downtown office, Cliff ch. Provo customers service manager, said.

Service personnel indicated the touch-tone desk model is frequently ordered by students and "yellow, white and red have been the most popular colors this year," Jerry Kern, telephone clerk, said.

"The students have been extremely patient," said Kathryn Abbott, Phonecenter supervisor. "They are still smiling after waiting in line two hours. It just makes my job more pleasant," she added.

The biggest problem at the Phonecenter is roommates placing double orders for phones. "Students need to correlate and plan their phone orders," Mrs. Abbott said.

Students also need to make sure the phones in their dorms or apartments are assigned to someone living there.

The cost to install phones is $20 if a jack is already in the room. Installation of one telephone by Mountain Bell costs a maximum of $32.25.

BYU retirement plan announced by Oaks

A new retirement fund plan announced by President Dallin H. Oaks can now raise university employees' retirement income.

Employees covered under the plan an employee save at least 3 percent of his or her salary by contribution to the plan on a payroll deduction basis. As is done, the university will contribute up to 10 percent of his salary, but the university will not make additional contributions above the 2 percent.

Employee contributions are vested immediately. The university contributions will not be vested for employee until two full calendar years. All contributions and earnings on them will be paid if the employee dies or retires. Only vested interests in the plan can be withdrawn while the employee is working for the university.

Employee contributions, as well as earnings on investments can be taxable only when the employee dies them, according to the plan.

Contributions to the fund will be invested in a mutual fund, a stock fund and a bond fund. Employees will determine the amount he or she wants to contribute to each fund.

Employees are hopeful that many employees will take advantage of this opportunity to augment their income retirement, and also to accumulate a cash reserve during the period of their employment," Oaks said. Other details will be circulated, in writing, to all employees well in advance of the effective date, January 1, 1979.

Fly's eye

Earth to eye cosmic rays

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — From a long time ago, from somewhere far away, have come atomic nuclei that are high-energy cosmic rays in our atmosphere.

An observatory made of two dozen five-foot diameter mirrors is being prepared to trace the origin and determine the composition of the high-energy cosmic rays scientists believe are from outside our galaxy.

The observatory is called Fly's Eye, from the compound lens of a fly's eye, and the scientists are Gene Loh, George Cassidy and Haven Bergeson, professors of physics at the University of Utah.

Loh said electronic equipment is being constructed this summer and will be installed this fall and the data recording will begin this winter.

The mirrors, housed in metal cans, are on a hill at the Army's Dugway Proving Ground in Utah's western desert.

There are many kinds of cosmic rays, some originating in our sun. Because of the abundance of these rays detectors may find thousands of cosmic rays a night, but the very high-energy rays may occur only once a week.

Physicists believe the high energy particles are nuclei — atoms stripped of their electrons — but they don't know whether they are hydrogen, iron or some other element.

The energy is such that the particles could not be contained by the gravity of our galaxy, the Milky Way, so the scientists believe they must have come from outside the galaxy.

They have been detected before by radiation-detecting equipment similar to Geiger counters, which shows the particles have arrived but not where they're from.

The Fly's Eye will detect the cosmic rays by the light they give off. The light, lasts only millions of a second — much too short a time to register with a person looking at the sky.

But the light will strike the mirrors.

The data from the current will be studied and it is hoped it will not only show where the high-energy particles are from, but provide information on how the particles react with the atmosphere and how matter can be created from energy.

While Fly's Eye now has 25 to 30 mirrors, it is planned to have 67 mirrors. More mirrors will be added when more money is available. The project is financed by a $300,000 yearly National Science Foundation Grant.

Court challenges school officials' legislative seats

Several Utah legislators may be unseated after a Sept. 18 Supreme Court hearing and decision on public school officials' eligibility to serve as legislators.

An Aug. 30 decision by Third District Court Judge G. Hal Taylor ruled teachers ineligible to serve for constitutional reasons, and was appealed early this month by Utah Deputy Attorney General Michael L. Deane and Legislative General Counsel Melvin E. Leslie.

The first ruling came in response to a suit filed by Salt Lake City real estate salesman Lynn A. Jenkins, who argued the Utah constitution bans anyone who holds a public office from serving in the legislature.

Nine educators presently serving in the legislature will be affected by Taylor's ruling. "No one has had the courage before now to challenge the right of those people to serve," BYU political science professor and Utah legislator Lee Farnsworth said.

Farnsworth said he is not affected by the decision because BYU is exempt from the ruling as a private university which is not funded by the state.

"It's about time it was done," added Farnsworth who said the decision has been avoided because teachers have held powerful positions in the legislature and there has been a reluctance to offend them.

Representative Stan Leavitt, an Alpine School District teacher, sees no conflict of interest.

The 13,000-member Utah Education Association will be allowed to enter the case as an "amicus curiae," or "friend of the court." The UEA will file briefs in an attempt to convince the court that denial to school teachers of places on legislative ballots will deny citizens the right to vote into office those they choose to represent them.

ATTENTION COLLEGE STUDENTS

You may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship includes full tuition, lab expenses, incidental fees, a reimbursement for textbooks, and $100 a month tax free. How do you qualify? You must have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate work remaining, and be willing to serve your nation at least four years as an Air Force officer. Scholarships are available to students who can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, and to those who are majoring in selected technical and non-technical academic disciplines, in certain scientific areas, in undergraduate nursing, or selected premedical degree areas. Non-scholarship students enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program also receive the $100 monthly tax-free allowance just like the scholarship students. Find out today about a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship and about the Air Force way of life. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details.

Cattlemen invite Nixon; Sydney government stalls

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The government doesn't want former President Richard Nixon to visit Australia, and neither do most of the newspapers. But the cattlemen want him to come and tell them how to get more of the U.S. market despite the opposition of American beef producers.

The Australian Cattlemen's Union, one of the country's most powerful lobbies, has invited Nixon to speak Sept. 23 to its annual convention at Surfers Paradise, a resort on the Queensland coast about 450 miles north of Sydney.

The union's national director, Barry Cassell, said a telegram inviting Nixon to speak was sent to San Clemente Wednesday following a telephone conversation with one of the former president's aides. He said no reply has been received yet.

"An address by Mr. Nixon would be invaluable because of his knowledge of the United States cattle lobby," said Cassell. He added that the United States is the biggest foreign market for Australian beef, and the American market is highly susceptible to pressure from American cattlemen.

Last week, the conservative government turned down Nixon's request to make an official visit to Australia and meet with Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser. The government said an official visit would be "inopportune" because of other official visits during September and October.

An aide of the ex-president said he planned to come anyway because "scores of Australian citizens" asked him to visit. A government source, who asked not to be identified, said he would be given a tourist visa "provided it's a genuinely private visit." But the federal police were reported worried that they would have trouble protecting him, even on a private visit.

It could not be learned immediately whether the government would consider the visit private if it included a speech to 1,500 cattlemen.

Burglary booming in Salt Lake County

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Burglars made off with more than $13.5 million worth of television sets, stereos, CBs and other merchandise in Salt Lake County last year.

That, say police, makes burglary one of the top businesses in the community. In the same year, ZCMI reported net profits of $3.8 million and Grand Central Stores reported $13.5 million in earnings.

And police say 1978 could be a boom year for burglars — so far, in the first six months of the year, they've taken $8 million worth of property from county residents.

Sheriff's detective Jerry Townsend says 90 percent of the merchandise is resold within 24 hours of the theft. Sergeant Gerald Maughan of the Salt Lake Police Department says so many people want to "get a good deal," burglars seldom have trouble getting rid of stolen merchandise.

"Most of the stuff that is stolen is in the hands of a fence within 15 minutes," Maughan said.

Just as in business, the most money is made by the person with the most clout, he said. In burglary, that person is the fence.

"The thief who gets 10 to 20 percent of the value on his goods gets a good deal," he said. "The fence is the one who makes the money — and 80 percent of all stolen goods go through fences."

He said merchandise worth as much as $4,000 has been fenced for $240, and $10,000 cars can go for as little as $300.

Often, legitimate merchants buy stolen goods. "It boils down to the fact that people are dishonest," said sheriff's deputy Joe Miller. "They're complacent and don't give a damn."

Many items stolen in Salt Lake are resold in this area, but some items are shipped to other parts of the country for easier resale. Townsend compared trying to break a burglary ring with trying to get the top man in a heroin ring.

Football predictions mark WAC openers

The 1978 football season kicks off this weekend with most of the WAC teams opening their seasons against non-conference clubs.

In a grudge match after last year's upset, BYU will again travel to Corvallis, Ore., to seek revenge for last season's 24-19 loss to the Beavers of Oregon State. Colorado State travels to Honolulu to battle the 1979 WAC entry, the University of Hawaii.

Nevada-Las Vegas goes to the West coast to battle Washington State of the PAC-10, UTEP clashes with Air Force and Utah stays at home to face Big Sky team Idaho State.

Wyoming and San Diego State have bye's this weekend. The Daily Universe kicks off its poll predictions, with students casting their predictions as to how the season will turn out. Ten predictions were randomly selected from the many submitted by students. These were averaged together and appear as the second set of scores. The first set belong to the Daily Universe sports staff.

At the beginning of each week all of the polls turned in will be tallied and the student submitting the prediction closest to the BYU game's actual score will win a free BYU sweatshirt. In the event of a tie, all WAC game predictions will be taken into account and the student submitting the closest predictions will win.

BYU 31, OSU 13

BYU 27, OSU 15

Despite the fact OSU upset BYU last year, a repeat looks slim. BYU will again use the passing game supplemented with the run. On the receiving end of Marc Wilson's aerials will be the experienced hands of Mike Chanister and tight end Tod Thompson.

UNM 21, Hawaii 14

UNM 27, Hawaii 14

The University of New Mexico travels to the islands of the Pacific for a non-conference game against Hawaii. In last year's tilt the Lobos ran up a 35-10 lead going into the final period, which Hawaii reduced to 35-26 before the final gun. Look for the Lobos to use the ground game, with fullback Mike Williams taking most of the assignments. Williams last year gained over 1,000 yards.

Wash. St. 24, UNLV 9

Wash. St. 31, UNLV 9

Washington St. may have some problems putting UNLV on ice. UNLV will be breaking out of Division II football this year. This will be the first meeting between the two.

Air Force 28, UTEP 7

Air Force 30, UTEP 8

UTEP was 1-10 in 1977 and Coach Bill Michaels faces the same problem he did last year. Although Air Force rounded up a stiff '77 schedule 2-8-1. The Falcons have 28 lettermen returning, compared to the Miners' 19.

Utah 14, Idaho St. 7

Utah 20, Idaho St. 12

For Bill Howard, this Saturday's non-conference match-up with Big Sky representative Idaho State should give him a good chance to review his 1978 team before facing the first WAC opponent, CSU, in late September. This will be the first meeting of the two since 1944. With Randy Gomez finishing 10th in the nation in passing last year, look for Gomez to go to the air frequently. The Utes will also have the chance to look over their premiere punter Rick Partridge, last year's first team All-WAC punter.

Injuries dampening basketball outlook

BYU basketball coach Frank Arnold was not in a joking mood Thursday night at the Cougar Club Sports Kickoff Banquet in Salt Lake City.

"I'm not in the position to, nor do I care telling you a joke," Arnold said, "... maybe because of what happened to me the last five days."

Arnold said he had just completed a recruiting trip to Southern California, when he learned one of the top high school players, "probably one of the best guard prospects in the U.S.," had cancelled a planned visit to BYU on Homecoming day.

If that wasn't enough to make Arnold sullen, news of injuries to other recruits and players didn't stike a good chord.

Injury report

Arnold told the Cougar fans that freshman sensation Devin Durrant continues to experience "back problems on a continuous basis, possibly from a potential degenerate disc."

Guard Scott Runia and center Alan Taylor will continue to be unable to play because of injuries. Runia was hit in the head Wednesday in a collision with ex-BYU star Jay Cheesman. Runia will miss play the next 10 days, Arnold reported.

Center Alan Taylor may have to undergo surgery on his ankle to remove a blood clot, and will probably be unable to play for about 4-6 weeks. "We hope he will be ready by the first game of the year," Arnold said. "But he will not be in peak condition to play his best in the first games of the year."

And to top everything, Arnold had some news about Danny Ainge, that at first chilled the 400-plus Cougar Club audience. "Danny Ainge's bishop in Syracuse (N.Y.) suggested to Danny that he might consider going on a mission," Arnold said, adding "That would be enough to ruin the year," and bringing laughter from the crowd.

Summer ball

Playing summer baseball for the Syracuse Chiefs, a Triple-A team of the Toronto Blue Jays organization, Ainge was struggling with a .190 to .200 batting average. "The Blue Jays were hoping that Ainge would hit somewhat around .200, that's all they expected of Danny," Arnold said.

But Ainge exploded his final month of the season, hitting at a .280 to .290 clip, finishing their season with .230 average. This effort won Ainge the team's outstanding player of the month.

"They're very happy with Ainge and he in turn is happy with the baseball program," Arnold quipped, adding that Ainge still intends to wear BYU colors for three more basketball seasons.

Season optimism

Other than the injuries and recruiting upsets that Arnold mentioned, he said the team is "enthused and excited about the upcoming season."

Arnold's sentiments were shared by BYU's athletic director Glen Tuckett. "As I contemplate the coming season, I salivate at just the thought of the year," he said.

Arnold said he is pleased with the summer progress of Runia, who in Arnold's opinion "has been playing better than I have ever seen him play before." Guard Greg Ballif had surgery a month ago, to remove a non-malignant tumor in his ankle. "It was apparently causing some problems in his jumping muscles, ligaments, and tendons. Now they feel with the tumor removed, he will be quicker and jump higher and be better off physically than ever before."

Return from missions

Craig Christensen and Steve Craig, who have returned from LDS missions, will add strength to the guard position, which Arnold claims will be "one of the very fine guard lines in America next year. We have ability, a legitimate All-America prospect, depth, size, quickness and shooters."

Craig, who was released from his El Salvador mission five months early, was suffering from hepatitis and parasitic conditions, which could have spread to his liver and kidneys, Arnold reported.

The BYU coach believes Craig, who was a standout his freshman year, is on schedule in recovery and about 80 percent effective. Arnold said Craig's brilliance is "one reason why Runia and Ballif are working so hard. Craig is anxious to get out there again."

McGuire fills spot

With Taylor sidelined for a few months, Arnold mentioned that Dave McGuire will have to be ready to take the load at the center position. "With proper dedication, Dave McGuire could be a better basketball player at center than Alan Taylor. The fact that Taylor won't be playing for a couple of months may be a blessing in disguise for Dave McGuire."

Arnold spotlighted the possibility of using one of the three highly regarded freshmen recruits: Steve Trumbo, Fred Roberts and Devin Durrant. "By playing with some of the best players in America through summer all-star games and camps, they have virtually eliminated the traumatic freshman year that most athletes have to go through."

Forward posts

Glen Roberts and Keith Rice, who manned the forward spots last year, are returning to the Cougar lineup. Rice, according to Arnold, has been playing in Oregon in a college division league, scoring 21 points a game. Kevin Nielsen had surgery on some cartilage in his knee, but is now 100 percent healed. Steve Anderson was not able to play much basketball this summer, since he was working more than 65 hours a week, Arnold said.

Women's tennis

Recruits strengthen team

The BYU women's tennis team is restocked and ready to go, according to Coach Ann Valentine. The five new players recruited by Coach Valentine, along with the experienced vets, "don't even know the meaning of the word defeat," she said.

"I can truthfully say I have never had such talent as we have on BYU's team this year," Coach Valentine said, at the Cougar Club banquet this week. Successfully recruiting five of the seven prospects, Valentine said "I have never had a team so spirited before."

Top recruit

At the top of the list of recruits is Maria Rothchild, St. Louis, Mo. Rothchild ranks fifth nationally in 18-under, was one of two girls selected to represent the U.S. at an international tournament in Africa, and has won both the Eastern Bowl Tournament in New York and the Seventeen Magazine Tournament in Los Angeles.

Rothchild was sought by every top university in the country, including UCLA, USC, Trinity, Miami and Stanford, Valentine said. "We thought for sure we had lost her," Valentine said of Rothchild's vacillation between Trinity and BYU.

Selects BYU

But after phone calls, a visit to the campus, and help from BYU supporters, Rothchild made her decision. "I've made up my mind," she told her coach. "Even though my best friend is going to Trinity, I'm coming to Brigham Young."

Rothchild also appeared on the cover of the July issue of "Tennis," and was featured in the August "World Tennis." "And that doesn't hurt publicity-wise," Valentine said.

Barlow joins sister

Wendy Barlow, Victoria, B.C., another valuable recruit, will join her sister who already plays for the Y. Wendy is ranked No. 1 in Canada and recently competed at Forest Hills. She finished high school a year early and played tournament tennis including European matches in order to build up her game.

Another nationally-ranked freshman to join the Cougar squad is Charlene Murphy, Alameda, Calif. She also graduated early and spent the spring on a European tennis circuit with her brother Matt, who will join the BYU men's tennis team this fall. She won the women's singles in Belfast, Ireland and Glasgow, Scotland, and doubles in Belfast and Guilford, England.

Doubles pair

Lani Wilcox, Las Vegas, Nev., and Mindy Watts, Salt Lake City, round out the roster of Cougar recruits.

Together they won the Intermountain Sectionals doubles title.

Wilcox ranked second in Intermountain Sectionals, and won the Nevada state singles high school title twice. Watts ranked fourth in Intermountain Sectionals, and won the Utah State 18-singles and doubles titles.

Veterans busy

The Cougar veterans have also been busy this summer. Tracy Tanner, Provo, who received All-American honors as a freshman last season, and Barbara Barnes, Mojave, Calif., have been following the 21-under tennis circuit. They won the doubles title at Jacksonville, Fla. Barnes used her lightning serve to win the women's division of the National Fast Serve Championship in Cleveland, Ohio, her winning serve clocked at 99 miles per hour.

10-month sport

"Tennis is a 10-month sport," Valentine said. Her team started practice sessions last Thursday, but had been in Provo a week before, practicing on their own for four hours a day to adjust to the altitude.

The Cougars make their first match debut at Arizona State Sept. 16 in a mixed team tennis match that will include players from the men's and women's teams from both ASU and BYU.

Sports Illustrated ranks Y 18th despite AP, UPI pre-season poll

Sports Illustrated, in Sept. 11 issue, has ranked the BYU football team No. 18 in the nation despite the fact that neither the United Press nor the Associated Press International rated the Cougars in their pre-season top-twenty polls. A communication sent yesterday to the Daily Universe, SI was quoted as saying "In the past two seasons the BYU offense has featured college football's most consistent aerial act, one that has produced 13 victories, two WAC championships and some of the happiest fans in America."

The article asks Coach LaVell Edwards his reason for going to the air instead of establishing a solid running game. LaVell's answer: 6-5 quarterback Marc Wilson.

Wilson threw for 2,418 yards and 24 touchdowns in seven starts after a knee injury ended Gifford Nielsen's college career.

The article mentions the tough schedule BYU faces at the beginning of the season which will begin this weekend with Oregon State in Corvallis, Ore.

Flag football sign-up starts

Flag football teams should register now with the Intramural Office if they want to compete this fall, according to Steve Carlson of the Intramural Office.

Carlson said each ward sports director and team captain should pick up a team roster form and return it to 112 RB by Sept. 14. Play begins Sept. 19.

Students are being sought to officiate the games, Carlson said, and applications for officiating are available in 122 RB.

A meeting for all ward athletic directors is scheduled for 5 p.m., Sept. 11 in 267 RB.

Carlson said 344 independent and ward teams and 3,210 total participants competed for flag football titles in four divisions last year.

Are You Confused?

If you a freshman or transfer student and are a little confused by the goings on of the last couple of days, you're not alone. Campus life may seem overwhelming, but you can sort it out by joining a Reference Group.

A Reference Group is a non-credit course EXCLUSIVELY for freshmen and transfer students. Each group consists of eight to fifteen students who meet with a well-qualified faculty or staff group leader.

The Reference Group introduces you to the university in a way no other class can, and to allow you to take advantage of the many opportunities provided by the university.

Specific class information is available in the class schedule under General Studies 190, pages 59 and 60. Register for your Reference Group as you would for any other class. Take an ADD/DROP card to the section of your choice during the add period at the beginning of the semester.

For further information, contact Clay Conn in the Learning Services Center, 3126 HBLB or call 374-1211 ext. 4306.

Captain Queeg (Charles Metten) laughs off the questions of Cdr. Challee (Ivan Crosland) in "Caine Mutiny Court Martial."

"Mutiny" has devastating impact

By BETH WOODBURY
Universe Entertainment Writer

Emily Dickinson once said she recognized good poetry by the feeling that the top of her head had been taken off.

Last night's performance of "Caine Mutiny Court Martial" gave me the same feeling. I left the theater shaking, both inside and out. Under the direction of Tad Danielewski, acting, lighting, sound, and set have all combined to create a production of devastating impact.

The major impression was one of total reality. The actors seemed to be in a world of their own, indifferent to the audience. However, the audience was not indifferent to the cast; they responded warmly to the actors from the start.

Scott Wilkinson, playing the big, blond, bull-headed Maryk, and Robert Nelson as his compact, dynamic defense counsel, Greenwald, started the action with a low-pitched but tense exchange of dialogue. From that point the action ran quickly and smoothly through the witnesses for the prosecution: a dapper and self-assured Queeg (Charles Metten), a supercilious Keefer (Eric Fielding), a nervous, bumbling Urban (Bryant Smith), a seething Keith (Tom Barnett), and a smooth, pleasant Southard (Karl Pope).

The act came to a hilarious climax with the appearance of the two psychiatrists: the bored, foot-tapping Lundeen (Marion Bentley), and the lipping, self-conscious Bird (John Huntington). Huntington's performance was slightly overdone, but the audience enjoyed it and enthusiastically applauded his exit. Capt. Blakely (Irwin Goodman) presided over the proceedings like a sharp-eyed and slightly predatory hawk, surrounded by his whispering, pencil-tapping, and thoroughly convincing court.

The audience, obviously pleased, greeted the second act with murmurs of anticipation, and laughed at every opportunity. However, when Queeg returned to the stand as a witness for the defense, it soon became apparent that what was happening was not funny. Silence fell as, under Greenwald's barrage of questions, Queeg's polished veneer cracked, crumbled, and fell away, revealing his frightened, childish, pathetic self.

The second scene of the second act was, like most denouements, anti-climactic. However, the cast maintained a high level of performance, and Robert Nelson's superb portrayal of Greenwald kept the suspense going to the end.

However, it was Metten who emerged as the star of the show. With his consistent, detailed, compassionate performance, he made Queeg not only a sympathetic but a tragic character. The last scene was superfluous; the curtain could have fallen. Queeg's exit and the audience would have been satisfied.

Metten's performance was the factor most visibly responsible for the success of the play. However, another factor played an equally important role: Karl Pope's set. The circular design kept eye moving, and the warm blues and wood provided a refreshing contrast to the stark black, dull browns of the men's uniforms. The subtle detail—the concentric rings painted on the floor, the globe in the corner, the beams creating the appearance of the hull of a ship—may not be so apparent to most audience members, but all these details combine to create a timeless and universal feeling indispensable to the production.

Ancient Chinese acrobatics to be presented at lyceum

The Chinese Circus, featuring kung fu, acrobatics, juggling, magic and traditional dancing, will open fall semester's lyceum program Saturday, Sept. 16 at 9 p.m. in the Marriott Center.

The Circus is comprised of 40 performers from Taiwan and is making its first U.S. tour. The BYU show will be the troupe's first and only performance in Utah.

There is still below-concourse seating available for the program, according to a representative from the Music Department. Tickets are $2 for students, $3.50 general admission, and may be purchased at the Music Ticket Office, HFAC.

First on the circus program is a "Typical Chinese Drum Dance," followed by "Chinese Juggling," "Circle of Fire and Knives" (precision tumbling) and "Chopstick Dance."

Other acts scheduled are "Plate Balancing," "Ribbon Dance," "Seesaw Tumbling" and "Sword Swallowing."

Two gravity-defying acts will also be performed, including "Ladder Balance," and "Tower of Chairs." In "Ladder," a girl climbs and descends a 12-foot ladder, standing straight, while another girl balances on top of her. Handstanding acrobats in "Chairs" form a tower of people balancing on top of chairs held by the acrobats. The entire tower rests on four bottles.

Most of the Circus' acts were created by the Chinese more than 2,000 years ago and have always been an integral part of Chinese culture.

The Chinese Circus has performed internationally for the past five years, visiting Southeast Asia, Central and South America, England, Israel, South Africa, Rhodesia and three states. The visit to BYU is sponsored by the university's "lyceum" committee—the ASBYU Culture Office and the Department of Music.

Other programs scheduled for the fall lyceum season are the Chitri Aipi, four harpists from Russia; the Abrasovic Folk Festival, the Yugoslav Youth Ensemble; baritone Tom Krause, and the Korean Symphony.

Season lyceum tickets are now on sale at the Music Ticket Office.

Cinema 'stronghold of culture'

By BETH WOODBURY
Assistant Entertainment Editor

A series of Alec Asner comedies, including Gene Wilder film, the Katherine Hepburn version of "Glass Menagerie" are among films to be shown during the 1978-79 season of the International Cinema, says Asner. Asner, professor of Marshall, coordinator of the program, says this season's films are "a little more than average," but with four weeks of comedies plus musicals, features, and films of supernatural. Winter semester's films will be on the heavier side, films by Truffaut, and other directors, and on the serious side.

Asner describes International Cinema as a "stronghold of culture." Films are selected months to a year in advance by an 11-member committee.

Humanities professor Marshall talks about the International Cinema's 1978-79 season. Marshall is coordinator of the cinema.

New York City for a month, where he watches five or six films a day.

"I go directly to the distributors," he says.

don't like the film I stop it after the first reel, though I usually feel obligated to see them all the way through.

"I choose films that are serious and have something to say," Marshall continues, "I also look for artistic integrity."

Marshall avoids "sentimental, schmaltzy, and commercial films. We're not interested in crowds, though we do want people to come," he says.

Because International Cinema is considered an academic program, students in humanities or language classes can get a free pass to the films.

General admission is 75 cents, and "for art film buffs it's the best thing around," Marshall says. "It's the best program of its kind between Chicago and San Francisco."

TV People

Edward Asner is returning this fall to the second season in the title role of "Lou Grant."

He was born on Nov. 15 in Kansas City, Mo. He attended Wyandotte School in Kansas City and the University of Chicago. He became interested in acting in high school classes. His other main interest is sports, and he was an all-city athlete in high school.

Asner pursued acting while attending the University of Chicago. His first stage role was as Thomas Becket in "Murder in the Cathedral."

During his two years with the U.S. Army in France, Asner's interest in sports led him to manage a basketball team, which was rated the second-best Army team in Europe.

After returning home, Asner joined the Playwright's Theater Club in Chicago. Moving to New York City two years later, Asner appeared on Broadway with Jack Lemmon in "Face of a Hero," Off Broadway in many works, including "The Threepenny Opera"; at the American Shakespeare Festival; and the New York Shakespeare Festival; and in stock for several seasons.

In 1961, Asner moved to Hollywood, and has been active in television and motion pictures ever since.

He received Emmy Awards in 1970-71, 1971-72 and 1974-75 for "outstanding performance by an actor in a supporting role in comedy" for his role of Lou Grant in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" on the CBS Television Network. He won another Emmy, in 1975-76, for his role in the drama "Rich Man, Poor Man." And, he recently won two "Television Critics' Circle Awards" one for his part of Lou Grant, and one for his role in the miniseries "Roots."

Asner lives in the Bel Air section of Los Angeles with his wife, Nancy, and their twins, Matthew and Liza and a daughter, Kate, plus three dogs, two cats, two goldfish and one turtle.

Vailey pollution remains problem

By DAVID LIGGETT
Universe Staff Writer

Air pollution in Utah County is not new. The problems and the search for solutions continue.

"The main air pollution problem is particulate matter," said Karen Murdock, a member of the Utah State Air Conservation Committee. Particulate matter is described as visible pollution which creates the haze often seen in industrial areas.

Calvin H. Bartholomew, associate professor of chemical engineering at BYU, said the 24-hour acceptable pollution standard for this area is 280 micrograms per cubic milligram for emissions.

Exceeds levels

"Utah County exceeds this level 50 to 60 times a year," he said.

He added, industrial processes in the area account for 70 percent of the pollution in Utah County. The major polluter, he said, is Geneva Steel.

In mid-April Geneva installed an anti-pollution device to help curb some of the pollution problem.

The cost of this device was over $9 million and is known as the "bag house," said John R. Bollow, manager of public affairs for U.S. Steel in the Mountain States District. Through a filtering system, emissions from the power house are better controlled, he said.

Bollow reported the bag house as being 99.6 percent efficient in removing pollutants generated from burning coal. "The bag house is used in the power house and only affects emissions from that area," he said.

EPA tests

"During the break-in period, tests are being conducted to measure the performance of the bag house. They are being conducted by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, as well as the Utah Air Conservation Committee."

Chris Phillips, a representative of the Denver EPA office, said, "Tests on the bag house are being conducted through an independent laboratory and take some weeks to complete. After the tests are completed, the EPA will analyze the results to see if Geneva Steel is in compliance with present standards."

Ms. Phillips said these tests are not given as a matter of routine. "They are only run when there is a question about a business being in compliance."

She said one of the largest complaints in steel cities is emissions from the coke ovens.

Court suit

"U.S. Steel has brought suit against the EPA in 10th Circuit Court on the constitutionality of the EPA standard of emission for coke ovens. Until a new regulation is written or the court decision is made, the EPA has no authority to test the coke ovens."

"Other problem areas seem to be the open hearth and the sintering plant," she added.

Al Rickers, director of the Bureau of Air Quality for the state of Utah, said negotiations are now being made with Geneva Steel concerning emissions.

Before Geneva added its new pollution abatement facility, smoke billowed from its powerhouse smokestack. U.S. Steel claims the facility greatly reduces its pollution.

Rickers said his agency is trying to work with those firms who cause large amounts of pollution. "To have them roll back the amount of emissions from their operations."

"If our agency can effectively control pollution in Utah, the EPA will leave the picture," he said.

Other concerns

Rickers said although Geneva is the largest contributor to pollution in Utah County, its office is also concerned with other polluting firms here. Some of those he mentioned include Pacific States Steel, BYU Heating Plant and Thorn Rock Products.

Rickers said since his agency is now negotiating with Geneva Steel, it would be inappropriate to say what problems concern Geneva presently.

However, he did say "since Geneva is the biggest single source of pollution in Utah County, that is where the biggest bulk of control is expected."

Bartholomew agreed that coke ovens and the open hearth are a problem. He said Geneva Steel has tried to curb problems in this area, too. "They have replaced doors on the coke ovens at an enormous expense, and are collecting the gases from the ovens."

He is also realistic about the economics involved in correcting pollution problems.

"It would be very expensive to put controls on the open hearth and may create some safety problems because of the extreme temperatures."

"Present technology would not allow Geneva Steel to remain competitive in the steel market if it had to spend millions of dollars on pollution control devices that are untested. Only if a new steel plant were built could many of these problems now present be more controlled. This does not seem feasible at the present time though," he said.

There has been some linkage of air pollution to cancer, but evidence to prove that it actually causes cancer will require years of study, he said.

Factors in the change of temperature affect air pollution and its hazard levels, so many factors must be considered.

Bartholomew said he believes Al Rickers is doing a good job in trying to find solutions to these problems.

Rural schools boosted by community spirit

Often old and in financial trouble, rural schools appear outwardly to be an endangered species.

Yet as important social centers they command an almost passionate loyalty within their communities that seems to give them new vitality.

The challenge facing the rural school, educating a broad spectrum of individuals with oftentimes a minimum of financial resources, is of special significance in Utah where 24 of the state's 40 counties are rural.

Dr. Ivan Muse, professor of secondary education at BYU, has long taken an interest in the training of teachers and administrators for the special challenges of rural education.

Major adjustment

Muse identifies isolation as the major adjustment factor faced by teachers going into a rural setting.

Muse's observation is borne out by student teachers' comments on their rural teaching experience. Mike Padiken, new elementary teacher on a Sioux Indian reservation in South Dakota, student-taught at the Uinta-Ouray Reservation east of Roosevelt. Padiken found living expenses high and conveniences scarce.

Though married himself, Padiken notes "some of the students complained about having nobody to socialize with and the lack of entertainment."

Alice Breckenridge, from Teton Valley, Idaho, grew up in a rural setting and would like to teach in a rural community someday, but not right away. Miss Breckenridge student-taught in the Milford School District.

"If I was married I wouldn't mind teaching in a rural school, but for a single person there is nothing to do," she said.

Aside from the teacher's personal life, isolation poses difficulties for him professionally. Muse said the rural educator has a difficult time supplementing his teaching with cultural enrichment type experiences like field trips to museums and cultural centers.

In addition, the teacher finds it more difficult to get the in-service training he needs. What would be a simple matter of a few classes at a nearby university for his urban counterpart is far more complicated for the rural teacher, Muse explains. Normally he must wait until the summer months to travel to a university and is often faced with the expense of bringing his family along.

Increased work

The limited financial resources of most rural schools translate into additional problems for the teacher. One of them is the increased work load.

"In large schools, there are sufficient students that teachers can instruct in one or two academic areas, while in the small rural school it is not uncommon to find teachers with four or more preparations daily," Muse said.

Though a difficulty for many rural teachers, the added work load is considered a plus by some of the student teachers. Roger Schlappi, who student taught in Fillmore, liked the opportunity to teach additional classes.

"I think the students who taught at rural schools got a chance to see their full potential while those teaching in an urban setting got the feeling the schools were flooded with student teachers," Schlappi said.

Despite the hardships resulting from limited finances, many rural communities are bitterly opposed to further consolidation of their schools. Teachers and former students from rural educational backgrounds believe this attitude is explained by examining the school's role in these rural communities.

"In Fillmore, the high school is a social hub of the community," Schlappi said. "Before the Delta-Fillmore football game, both towns go crazy. Some of the kids are let out of school to gather firewood for the pep rally the night before. On the day of the game all the businesses close."

Communities boost

One girl from a rural school recalls the way her community rallied around the school's drama productions, donating labor and money for sets and costumes.

"If the community lost its school it would lose its vitality," Schlappi said. He remembers the lengths to which his own school district went to in order to keep its school open. "They even had a campaign where they were finding people in the community who hadn't finished high school and trying to get them enrolled."

When it was rumored that Milford would be combined with Beaver High School, some students vowed they would quit school, Miss Breckenridge said.

Muse believes the real hope for solving the problems of rural schools lies in the training of its personnel. He said BYU is planning a teacher-exchange workshop in Garfield County this fall.

"We'll take over three high schools and three elementary schools, lock, stock and barrel," he said. In the exchange, he said, student teachers will operate the schools while the regular faculty attends rural education workshops at BYU.

Source of gold does not glitter, gleam

CARLETONVILLE, South Africa (AP) — While telephones jingle in London, Zurich and Chicago and speculators push gold to record prices, black miners crawl through waist-high tunnels to wrench the metal from the world's deepest mine. Their sweat-soaked bodies give some hint of why the metal is so precious. The miners' day begins in a steel cage hurtling downward at nearly 40 miles per hour past layers of time imbedded in rock.

It is almost an hour of stop-and-go before they reach the bottom, where they crawl through a maze of tunnels little more than a yard high to take their turns with jackhammers against the solid rock.

The temperature of the rock is 135 degrees. The dust-filled air is refrigerated to a relatively cool 90 degrees, with humidity 95 percent.

The mine, called Western Deep Levels, is the world's deepest at 13,000 feet — almost 10 World Trade Center buildings on end. An army of 12,351 blacks and 978 whites daily risk their lives to scratch an ounce of gold from every two tons of rock.

Western Deep Levels, 43 miles west of Johannesburg, harvests about 263 pounds a day. It and the other 34 major gold mines in South Africa produce about 700 metric tons of gold a year.

South Africa has 70 percent of the free world's gold and in the year ending June 30 earned $3.7 billion from gold sales. Uranium, once a worthless by-product of gold mining, earned the country $1.3 billion.

Mosutt Moatsdugha, a 35-year-old black miner from neighboring Botswana, is one of 378,000 black and 38,000 white miners who descend into the bowels of the earth every day in South Africa to drill and blast specks of gold to fill the country's coffers.

Mosutt says he likes it here "because of the money." As a team leader, or "boss-boy," he supervises a dozen drillers and "cheezers" — men who place explosives into drilled holes. Mosutt earns $11.08 per eight-hour shift and works 11 shifts in 14 days.

Mosutt clambers through the jagged tunnels to make sure the drillers keep hammering. In near-total darkness, pierced only by miners' lamps, the sweat-soaked men half sit and half recline on a bed of crushed rock and drill with bone-jarring noise into the wall containing the unseen gold in a band an inch to a foot wide.

Shirtless miners bathed in the spray of water-cooled jackhammers lean into drills. Their helmets scrape the chiseled roof pressing down at about 14,000 pounds per square inch.

Add-drop procedures differ in departments

With the add/drop deadlines rapidly approaching, students are again desperately attempting to formulate "just the right class schedule."

Monday is the deadline for dropping classes without a fee and Sept. 18 is the last day classes may be added. Oct. 10 is the final deadline for dropping classes.

Different colleges and departments handle the add/drop procedures in various ways.

Some departments consider add and drop requests at tables located near their college advisement centers, while other departments allow instructors to sign add/drop cards. Still other departments use a combination of the two systems.

The Physical Education Department processes all classes added or dropped in the walkway between the Richards Building and the Smith Fieldhouse. In addition, students wishing to add a class are required to get the signature of the instructor.

Charlene Lind, chairman of the Clothing and Textiles Department, said, "Dropping is done through the department secretary during the first week and adding is done through the instructor at all times."

After the first week, she said, dropping classes must be approved by the instructor. This gives the instructor an opportunity to counsel with the student.

Donovan E. Fleming, chairman of the Psychology Department, said, "We have department secretaries sign any drops. Certain faculty members authorize the department secretaries to also sign add cards, while other faculty members prefer to sign the add cards themselves."

The Physics and Astronomy Department has reception desks set up in the Eyring Science Center where secretaries and aides process the add/drop cards.

Physics, chemistry and geology classes may be added and dropped in the Eyring Science Center reception area.

Physics and Astronomy Department Chairman Kent B. Harrison said professors in his department will occasionally sign the drop cards, but all adds must be taken care of through the secretaries.

Currently the addition of religion classes will be handled by the individual instructors, while drops can be approved by either the instructors or the secretaries.

In the accounting department, 200-level classes were added and dropped the first two days of class. Upper division classes were added or dropped by the professors in class. After the first two days all add/drops were handled by the professors.

In the economics department both teachers and assistants are signing Econ. 110 changes, since it is a general education class.

All other add/drops in the economics department are handled by the professors themselves.

In the home economics department the instructors usually sign the add/drop sheets themselves.

Ruth Brasher, chairman of the department, said no problems are created by making the professors responsible for their own add/drops. "If an instructor has a full section, he knows the number of openings available in each of his classes."

The civil engineering department handles the seminar classes while the professors are responsible for the technical classes.

The department chairman in civil engineering, James Barton, explained, "If a professor isn't available, we have it set up so someone can sign the card for the student and the student won't be held up trying to track down the instructor."

Students continue to add and drop classes, trying to get the "perfect" schedule.

Daily Bulletin

New classes

Recreation Education 371, designed to teach family values, has been added Thursday evenings from 7:45 to 9:45 in 133 RB. The 2-hour class is index number, 72895.

Social Science 100 lab sign-up

will be held today from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in 109 ELWC. All students enrolled in the course should sign up. Graduate assistants will be on hand to answer questions.

Is there a career for you in law?

A class covering paralegalism meets Mondays at 4:30 p.m. in 214 JRCB. The class is 3 credit hours and will stress realistic cases, rather than theory. For further information call Judge Ivan Lawrence, instructor, or Department of Evening Classes, ext. 2872. Deadline to enroll is Sept. 18.

Opening Social

Honors Program opening social will be held at Timp Lodge tonight from 6 to 9. Admission is free to members who have paid fall dues. Tickets can be picked up in the Honors Office, 4012 HBL. Those needing rides should meet at the Law School east parking lot at 5:30 p.m.

Meeting

Chi Triellas will meet today at 4 p.m. for pictures for the open house posters. Meet at the Marriott Center parking lot. Wear formal, long dresses. There will be a mandatory meeting for actives Sept. 13 at 7:30 p.m. in Apt. 38, Riviera. Bring $25 dues. Any questions call Gay at 377-4153.

Survival? No, just ticket pick-up

Pitching a tent and "camping out" can be a fun way to spend the weekend - especially if it assures getting card stunt seats for football season. Doug Holland, Salt Lake City; Bob Albrecht, San Francisco; Steve Hishop, St. Louis, Mo.; Blair Menlove, Phoenix, Ariz.; Jeff Wilde, Provo and Glenn Garzo, Provo, began their "camp out" Thursday afternoon along with dozens of other football enthusiasts who want to ensure getting those seats in the card stunt section of the stadium. Tickets are supposed to be handed out Saturday, according to the ASBYU Athletics Office, but if the rainstorms continue, it could be a wet wait.

Eyring stresses complete interest in work

Solving problems in life or science consists of complete interest in what you are working on and not setting unreachable goals.

This was part of a message delivered to BYU engineering and science students Thursday by Dr. Henry Eyring, a distinguished professor of chemistry at the University of Utah.

In the lecture, sponsored by the College of Engineering Sciences and Technology, Eyring discussed "Models that Scientists and Engineers Live By."

To succeed as a scientist, Eyring said, "you must be a compulsive worker. Do your very best you can, and after that you'll have another job."

"There isn't anyone in this audience who couldn't be famous if he or she is willing to pay the price," Eyring added.

Students were informed on how problems which face scientists may be handled and the knowledge each student should have if he or she is to be an effective scientist or engineer.

When dealing with theories, Eyring said, "every theory or explanation I know of has to be added to, to make it worth anything."

It is the responsibility of the modern-day scientist to continue building upon theories and ideas in order for science to progress, he said.

Eyring said it isn't much harder to expand a theory or challenge a frontier than to do "daily work."

"But if you don't make it to the frontier you're working on, you're just repeating other people's work. You must be aware of other's work to build upon your own."

Finding the "rate determining step," or as Eyring explained, "the thing that will determine the rate of progress in a problem," is also essential in solving scientific operations.

"Once the rate determining factor is found, you must remedy it," he said.

Eyring also expressed his appreciation for the gospel. "It tells me where I came from and where I'm going. I like this church and I know it will help you in every way it can."

Born in Mexico in 1901, Eyring is the author of nine books and 580 technical articles on topics in chemistry, physics, metallurgy and biology. He has been the dean of Graduate School of the University of Utah and Chairman of Chemistry at Princeton University.

He has received 15 honor doctorates and was awarded the National Medal of Science in 1967 by the late President Lyndon Johnson. Eyring is widely recognized for his work in atomic and molecular theory and is world famous for his theory on "Absolute Reaction."

Dr. Henry Eyring speaks to science students on the challenges and problems of scientific progress.

THE MARKETPLACE

Is it possible to be too informed about current events? Yes. Suppose you are a young woman and you know who your U.S. senators are, who the vice president is, and you know about the latest legislation being debated in Congress.

Let's also suppose you came to BYU to get an education and not a husband. Let's further suppose you meet an uninformed young man who you find attractive but he is uninformed about current affairs. After several lengthy conversations you find him to be dull, unimaginative and at a total loss in what is going on in the news. He is intimidated by your ability to articulate the issues but unable to match you charm, wit and intelligence, so he challenges you in the dating contest at the Cougarat. You wisely decline.

There are several solutions to this problem. The first could be for the young woman to become less informed by dropping her reading and work at being dull enough for the young man. The second solution might be for the young man to begin reading and become an exciting, imaginative information person who is fun to be around.

However, on the other hand, there are advantages to being uninformed about current events. No one will bother talking to you unless they are also dull and uninformed. Another advantage involves time. Being uninformed requires no time commitment. That way you have more time to waste.

But most important, being uninformed helps keep your mind cleared of meaningful or disturbing thoughts. "Ignorance is Bliss."

Perhaps the most compelling reasons for being uninformed would be the notoriety one could acquire. For example, a conversation between you and your friend:

"Jimmy Carter is the most unpopular President in recent times."

You reply, "That's because he's a Republican."

People avoid uninformed, ignorant people when they need answers to questions or stimulating conversation. However, there are far more advantages to being informed than uninformed. People who are informed know the difference between right and wrong, useful information, between good opinions and personal bias, between subjectivity and objectivity.

Becoming informed helps keep a democracy healthy and free people free. It allows for choices, not chance. If you are not informed and don't want to become informed, you shouldn't be reading this newspaper.

Church draws comments

The Church or the World

Editor:

Lon Wilcox's opening editorial was a shocker. His comments, though well-meant, reflect a serious misconception of history as well as an appalling lack of vision with respect to the church universal.

Being a Mormon was never a crime in this country. Certain of our religious practices, e.g. plural marriage, were prohibited, making some Mormons in effect outlaws. Joseph Smith himself was, of course, sued, arrested, and jailed many times on various charges. But the real crime was perpetrated by those who sought to create and enforce laws in violation of the First Amendment.

No law was ever passed in this nation making membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints criminal. As to being a "shameful thing," no true Mormon has ever considered his faith to be such. The Gentiles may have thought it shameful — many do today — but what do we care for the praises of men?

In those early days as in our own, church leaders' statements concerning social issues have been profuse. If, as Brother Wilcox suggests, they were in the past less frequent — a debatable point — they were without a doubt more pungent. One good blast from Brigham or Heber was more potent and memorable than a dozen of our contemporary conference talks on current issues, which must often be so carefully worded as to not offend half the saints out of the church.

From the Whitmers, to Godbe and Tullidge, to our present ERA defenders, some members have always taken offense. There have always been "those who feel the church has no right to participate in social or political affairs." But such people have not merely "lost the vision," they have lost their way.

The only difference between then and now is that our present leaders have, so far, shown a great deal more mercy with these dissidents than former leaders might have.

When I hear people whine about how "much more difficult" are the problems we American saints must now face, how numerous, how subtle, how insidious, I wonder if we are not becoming instead of the vaunted "warriors" of the last days, just a bunch of spoiled brats. The business of warriors is, after all, no longer so clear, we need to draw it again, heavily. In every nation the choice is, was and always will be the same — the church or the world. Only among those who have abrogated their principles and forgotten their brethren is it any less defined.

Pro-ERA editorial illogical

Editor:

After reading Mr. Tyler's arguments in favor of the ERA and the extension of its ratification period one can only wonder if he has ever bothered to read the proposed amendment.

Mr. Tyler implies that the ERA will give women equal pay for equal work. This is as false as any other lie. Since the vast majority of agencies which employ people are not the federal or state governments there is nothing in the ERA which will compel these private agencies to give women equal pay for equal work. The amendment applies only to the federal and state governments. If you doubt this, read the first paragraph of the amendment. In relation to the subject of equality of pay, the ERA is totally irrelevant.

The remainder of Mr. Tyler's article is an equally baseless and illogical. Were it not for the limitation of space the other faults could be discussed. Instead let me urge all to study the issue more closely. Hopefully you will do a better job than Mr. Tyler.

Religion enhances education

Editor:

Mr. Buckner's implication in Wednesday's editorial section that learning at BYU is shackled by the religion responsible for establishing the university is analogous to asserting that the football program is shackled by the existence of a coaching staff. Admittedly this analogy would be less effective if parallels were drawn with the basketball program, however the fact remains, if our religion is all we need, it to be then true education must be enhanced rather than retarded by its presence.

Learning is a spiritual experience and is intensified when there is spiritual communication between the student and the Holy Ghost. Adherence to church standards narrows the gap between student and spiritual teacher. Thus the church is the true believer's most efficient vehicle to intellectual development.

Mr. Buckner's error stems from his taking the spectator's myopic yet often occupied viewpoint that the actions of a few members accurately represent the church as a whole.

Students, of course, must apply the same tests of spiritual discernment to the secular dogma taught at the university as they supposedly apply the doctrine taught in church meetings. Whether or not the professor or teacher is an ecclesiastical authority is irrelevant.

Members of the university community would diligently apply the spiritual gifts we have at our disposal it would undoubtedly hasten the time when BYU realizes its prophetic destiny. However, if we do as Mr. Buckner advocates and throw off the "shackles" of our religion we effectively negate our contribution to that destiny.

Here it is once again. September and the start of fall semester.

Any day now, a letter will appear in the Universe box about the atrocious Utah driver and perils of being a pedestrian.

It seems that every year some freshman arrives campus and is awed at the attitudes and practices of the Utah driver. After several near-misses at crosswalks, he/she writes a letter to the Universe complaining about the hard-hearted and selfish drivers whose main pleasure in life is running down the hapless pedestrian.

And the Universe prints it, as always. And some senior reads it, decides this is his last chance to see his name in print, and writes a letter to the Universe complaining about the reckless attitudes of the pedestrian.

AND some faculty member reads that letter when the Universe prints it, decides he had better write one deprecating childishness and unimportance of the letters editor.

Therefore, to save time and energy on the part of all these people, I propose the following letter be and republished each fall semester:

Dear Editor,

After a week here at BYU I feel a need to express my concern for the way the pedestrians and drivers of this campus are so important way while making way about, to and from classes, work and pleasure activities.

Pedestrians need to look carefully both ways running recklessly out in front of the oncoming traffic.

Drivers need to be more discriminatory in the ports to thin out the pedestrian population. Graduate student a fighting chance by honking their horns as you barrel down on a pedestrian.

The Daily Universe could help in this effort by including a box score each day in the sports section reporting on the current number of hits and misanthropy to be symbolically awarded at the end of the semester to the winning side.

By following these suggestions, a spirit of camaraderie and sportsmanship will be instilled in the student body and local populace, resulting in closer ties and fewer bad feelings.

Sincerely,

A freshman senior faculty member.

U.S.-China Diplomacy a necessity

The recently concluded U.S. visit to China, Communist Party Chairman Hua Kung-feng to Eastern Europe, the Middle East and Africa, is a continuing effort to create new alliances and enter the economic community while the Soviet Union.

In recent months China has sent a senior foreign minister to Japan, initiated a student exchange program with the United States, sent high government officials to the Middle East, and a diplomatic move has been accompanied by derogatory editorials in the "People's Daily" aimed at Soviet revision and aggression.

The defamatory statements of Chinese officials, the results of widening Sino-Soviet ideological fueled by a vast Soviet military presence just over China's northern border. This Soviet military presence in China's backyard makes for mistrust of Moscow a very real factor for the Chinese.

Lambasting Moscow and favor with Western capitalist diplomatic actions calculated to drive the Soviet threat to China.

Since the Sino-Soviet split early sixties on the one hand and Korean and Vietnam conflicts on the other, China has walked a tightrope between the two super powers. China's continuing effort to remain to remain safe from attack, to continue its economic growth, has adopted the diplomatic game of playing one against the other. This position now in China. In fact the game played once before in China during the Three Kingdoms era (220-255).

During that time China was into three mutually hostile states. Shu, Wei and Wu. Wu was considerably weaker than Shu or Wei, but it was not strong enough to overrun the other two and unify the country. In other words, they were in a state of mutual hostility. If Shu attacked and defeated Wei, Wei would leave Shu weak. If Wei attacked and defeated Shu, Shu would leave Wei weak. With this in mind the strategist of Shu courted and allied with Wei, which did not mean Shu was to be destroyed. Wei to defeat Shu with ease. With this in mind the strategist of Shu courted and allied with Wei, which did not mean Shu was to be destroyed.

This drama has come to life, a worldwide stage upon which finding herself playing the part of the weaker Wu, must survive. China continues to move toward better relations with the West, American, she can feel secure a attack would not take place. The diplomatic game of playing one against the other is sufficient to keep the Sino-Soviet relationship.

The Chinese have none diplomatic cards for centuries, has the weakest hand in diplomatic card game, she must move toward better relations with the West, American, she can feel secure a attack would not take place. The diplomatic game of playing one against the other is sufficient to keep the Sino-Soviet relationship.

Cooperation needed to avoid parking crisis

BYU's building boom is gobbling up parking spaces, increasing the magnitude of what is already a perennial problem.

Sgt. Golden Hardy, traffic coordinator for BYU Security/Police, said 490 D zone parking spaces were obliterated to make room for the new Comprehensive Clinic building east of the J. Reuben Clark Law School.

The parking problem will, no doubt, become more acute as enrollment increases. More students bring more cars and the construction of more buildings. The term, "parking crisis" may become the catch-phrase of the '80s and '90s.

There are already more students with cars than spaces to accommodate them. Hardy estimates that there are 12,000 students with vehicles enrolled this year. All are vying for about 9,600 parking spaces.

The key to attacking the parking crisis is a two-fold approach, combining thoughtful cooperation from students and far-sighted planning by university officials.

Those who seek student cooperation face two formidable challenges — laziness and the American love affair with the automobile.

Often, campus parking spaces will be occupied by cars bearing stickers from neighboring apartment complexes. Evidently, some students would rather endure a 10-minute search for a parking space than spend a leisurely five minutes walking to school.

During morning and evening rush hours, one may observe hundreds of cars with lone occupants. Since the relaxation of the energy crisis, drivers seem to have gotten out of the car pool habit.

Hardy pointed out that students who form car pools can divide the $20 price for a B sticker among several drivers.

An ever-present source of frustration is the paranoid Porsche driver who parks diagonally across two spaces in order to avoid dents and scrapes.

The Marriott Center lot is not a popular place to park as evidenced by hundreds of vacant stalls. Hardy mentioned that it takes no more than seven minutes to walk from there to the heart of campus.

Students can indeed help out. But these are stop-gap measures at best. It is time now for officials to plan short and long-range solutions.

Construction of a parking terrace may seem far fetched at this point but planners should consider it as a possible solution to a future parking crisis.

Officials can encourage the formation of car pools by offering preferred spaces to students who share automobiles.

Provo City could be asked to help out by expanding and improving bus service to and from campus. The university might even offer its own bus service.

Like the energy crisis, BYU's parking problem is everyone's concern.

'Reversion clause' not valid in ski resort controversy

The previous Provo City Commission pulled the wool over the eyes of its constituency when it acquired and then turned over to a private developer the surplus land adjacent to the Utah State Mental Hospital. The land was sold "at cost" so to speak and much was said at the time about the so-called "reversion clause" if the developers reneged on their promised deal and failed to build the Heritage Mountain (formerly Four Seasons) ski complex east of Provo. If the development somehow fell through, the commissioners assured us, the land would revert back to city ownership.

Now we learn something we suspected all along: that the reversion clause is not worth the paper it is written on. If the developer, Wilderness Associates, should default on repayment of its loan on the land, ownership should not revert back to Provo City. Instead, it would end up for foreclosure in the hands of First Security Bank, which holds the mortgage. Any banker will tell you it is just good business to loan $600,000 on a piece of land probably worth in excess of $3 million.

We would also doubt seriously whether Provo City, the U.S. Forest Service, or any other public or private entity would have the legal right to force a corporation to disclose its "financial capability" in building the proposed $110 million project. So far, Wilderness has played its funding cards close to the vest, with only vague hints about a Daddy Warbucks waiting in the wings ready to invest his fortunes in the precarious business.

We are still against the project because of the sociological impact such a ski resort would have right in Provo's backyard. Nevertheless, at the same time, we are aware that a poll last year showed a slight majority of local citizens would like to see it built, most of them for recreational reasons. If the project should get underway, the Universe would then support it, hopefully to a successful conclusion.

The previous city commission was blinded by visions of an economic bonanza bolstering Provo's deteriorating tax base. As it looks now, this anticipated windfall could be long in coming, if at all. We hope the current city commission has a little more foresight than its predecessor and will guide Provo through to a well-planned and designed ski resort ... or if for some reason that should fall through, at least to some other even more beneficial use of what was once prime public land.
